Overview

The Documentary Organization of Canada (DOC) is the collective voice of Canada's independent documentary creators. DOC began in 1983 as the Canadian Independent Film Caucus (CIFC) to represent the interests of Canada's growing community of indie doc filmmakers. Today DOC has over 1000 members across six chapters from coast to coast. DOC's National office leads on research and advocacy work that strengthens the ecosystem for documentary production while DOC chapters provide community support, professional development, and networking opportunities. DOC negotiates preferential professional rates and discounts for our members. Every day, we work to create conditions that will ensure that documentaries - and their creators - thrive.

Festival Concierge

What is Festival Concierge?

DOC's Festival Concierge (FC) service was created to help fill a gap in knowledge and support services for documentary filmmakers who were seeking to leverage the increasingly complex domestic and international film festival circuit and achieve their audience, impact, and distribution goals. Festival Concierge was developed in 2014 and then relaunched in 2019 as a for-fee-service providing tailored one-on-one consultations and direct strategic guidance and supporting resources for film festival distribution. We are proud to be the only such service available to independent doc filmmakers in Canada!

GOALS:

To take the guesswork out of the complex festival maze by providing producers with strategic advice in order to successfully navigate the domestic and international film festival circuit. By creating space and stimulating discoverability, Festival Concierge will act as a catalyst toward expanding international market opportunities for Canadian documentary filmmakers.

FESTIVAL CONCIERGE CONSULTANTS:

We want to ensure that your finished production is exhibited to its full potential. Our expert consultants will ensure you revisit your core intentions, stay connected to the film's purpose, and practice detachment and resilience as your film enters the market. Where are energies and resources best applied? What options could be eliminated? What are the possibilities? These are all important questions Festival Concierge will help to answer. In order to provide a more tailored service, we now have 3 Festival Concierge Consultants with different areas of specialization for you to choose from. Your consultant looks forward to helping you build a festival/distribution strategy customized for your production!

EACH SERVICE PACKAGE INCLUDES:

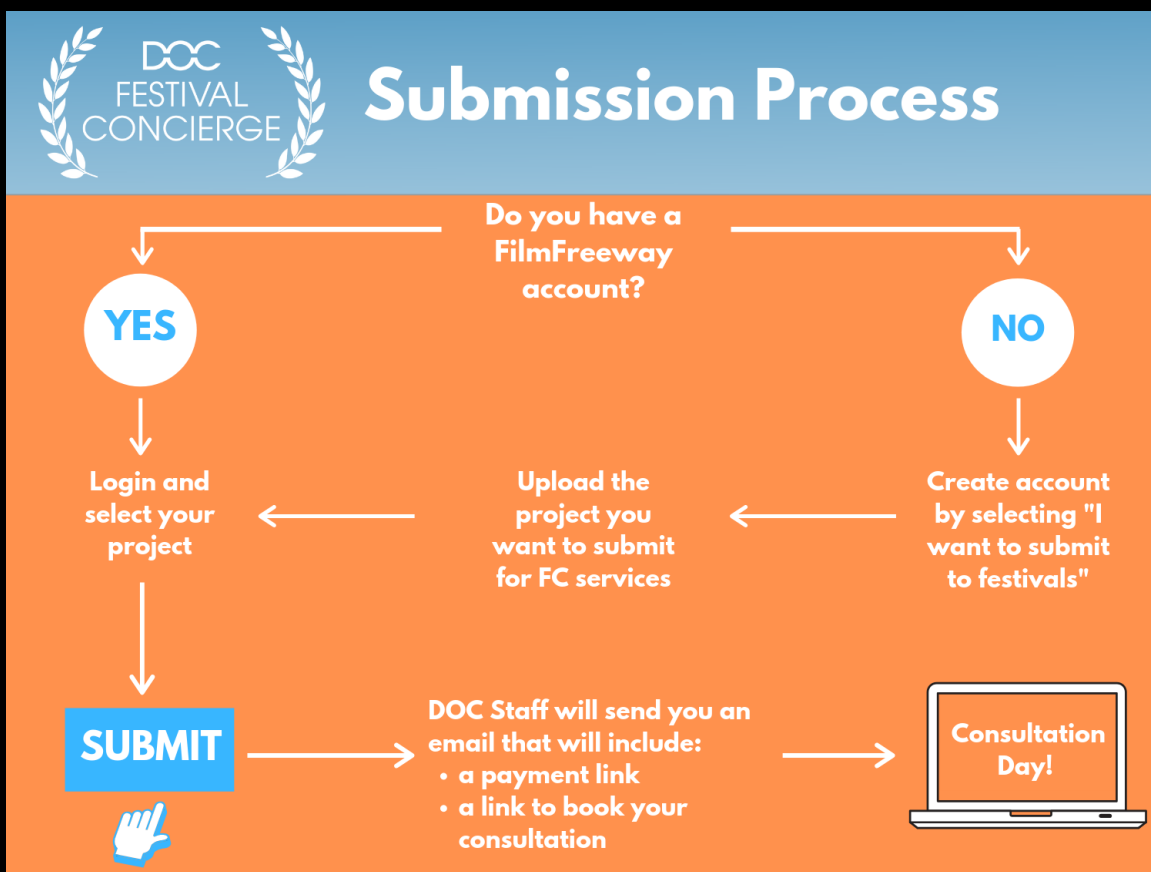

1. A ONE-ON-ONE CONSULTATION WITH ONE OF OUR CONSULTANTS OVER THE PHONE/VIDEO CALL
2. YOUR CONSULTANT WILL REVIEW THE PRODUCTION AND PROVIDE A WRITTEN ASSESSMENT WITH RECOMMENDATIONS
3. YOU WILL BE PROVIDED WITH PROPRIETARY FESTIVAL DISTRIBUTION RESOURCES, INCLUDING FESTIVAL TRACKING SHEETS

to note: We consider submissions that are >60 mins to be feature films and submissions that are <60 minutes to be short films

DOC History

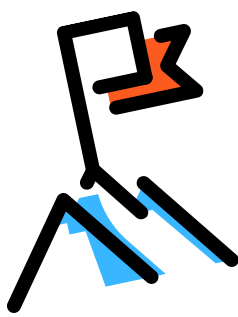

In 1983, a small group of documentary filmmakers came together to discuss the state of documentary production in Canada. These artists and business people quickly saw the value of bringing all professional documentarians together into one group: one that would publicly celebrate documentary, advocate on behalf of documentary filmmakers and strengthen the documentary community across the country. As the documentary genre gained in popularity, independent chapters formed in other key municipalities, which today includes chapters in Ontario, Quebec, British Columbia, Manitoba, Alberta, and the Atlantic Provinces. Originally incorporated as the Canadian Independent Film Caucus in 1990, the association has been built on the efforts of many artists who have tirelessly volunteered their time and shared their passion to shape the vibrant documentary community we have today. Known as the Documentary Organization of Canada (DOC) since 2007, DOC is a bilingual, national professional arts organization and Canada's only professional association exclusively serving independent documentary makers. Led by a dedicated group of documentarians who serve as volunteer board of directors and a fluently bilingual core staff, the organization now represents approximately 750 documentary creators from across the country through six regional chapters.

What does DOC do?

DOC works to strengthen the documentary industry by conducting vital research and engaging policymakers through advocacy. DOC provides professional development and networking opportunities to advance and support documentarians at every stage of their careers. DOC offers services, such as Festival Concierge, and benefits that help members reduce their business costs. DOC provides timely and essential research and information via webinars, publications, and newsletters, and connects its members across the country by hosting the vital DOC-discussion online community.

Milestones

The CIFIC (Canadian Independent Film Caucus) was founded in Toronto in 1983 and advocated successfully for the creation of the CFDC's (now Telefilm) documentary broadcast envelope.

In 1990, the CIFIC launched POV Magazine, Canada's premiere and longest running magazine covering documentary culture.

In 1992, the CIFIC was instrumental in bringing new documentary strands to public airwaves, including CBC's Witness and The Passionate Eye.

In 1994, the CIFIC founded Hot Docs – now North America's biggest documentary-focused film festival.

In 2003, the CIFIC was renamed DOC.

In 2004, DOC Quebec co-founded the RIDM Forum, the industry component of North America's largest francophone documentary festival.

In 2010, DOC successfully advocated for the creation of the Canada Media Fund's English POV Program.

In 2013, the Ontario Chapter launched the DOC Institute, a dedicated hub providing professional development activities for non-fiction professionals.

In 2019, DOC launched a two-year free membership program for Indigenous filmmakers, encouraging greater representation and equity in Canada's film industry.

In 2021, DOC launched a two-year free membership program for new BIPOC (Black, Indigenous, and People of Colour) filmmakers. This helped encourage more representation in Canada's documentary industry and brought many new members to DOC as a result.

DOC Chapters

DOC is led by a volunteer board comprised of both “at-large” directors, elected by the membership, and representatives from each of the regional chapters.

DOC's six regional chapters are located across Canada. These chapters coordinate professional development workshops and networking events for their members.

Mandate

The Documentary Organization of Canada (DOC) is a member-driven, not-for-profit, National Arts Service Organization, with charitable status. Its mandate is to:

- Support, promote and develop the art form of documentary creation;
- Advocate on behalf of its members to foster an environment conducive to documentary production; and
- Strengthen the sector within the broader screen industry.

Mission

The Documentary Organization of Canada (DOC) is the collective voice of Canada's independent documentary creators. DOC:

- Promotes Canadian documentary creators, documentary culture and the documentary community;
- Champions the creative, social and cultural contributions of documentary, including its role in fostering civic engagement and a democratic society;
- Advances the rights of documentary creators from historically marginalized, underrepresented and misrepresented groups in Canada to hold agency in storytelling and production;
- Advocates for a thriving ecosystem for the production and distribution of documentaries across all platforms;
- Advocates for equitable access to resources, fair compensation and safer spaces for all documentary creators;
- Promotes a culture of documentary making based on honest creative exploration, inventiveness, respect, reciprocity, and responsible and ethical documentary practices;
- Connects and supports diverse documentary creators across Canada; and
- Fosters connections with documentarians and stakeholder organizations internationally.

Vision

Documentary is widely recognized as an essential part of Canada's social fabric, fostering understanding and activating democratic discourse and social action. Canada's thriving community of independent documentary creators benefits from a sustainable financing ecosystem, and distribution networks that bring Canadian documentaries to communities big and small, nationally and internationally. Documentary production is rooted in a culture that values creative exploration, diversity of voice and expression, and deeply ethical practices anchored in respect, reciprocity and collaboration. Canada's history of documentary storytelling is known and celebrated by society while new generations of creators are supported to constantly reimagine the genre.
